Ius Primi Viri

“NGO in Special Consultative Status with the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations”

Millennium Development Goals need to be implemented through an innovative methodology to allow policy makers, in charge of the future of the Earth, to acquire full consciousness of the aims and principles of every democratic State, so improving their functions.

The State is a living organism and political science has to know its physiology, otherwise malfunctions increase entropy levels. Every manager has to embody his/her role with these aims, conditio sine qua non to carry it out correctly.

Since its birth Ius Primi Viri, aware of the lack of balance existing inside society, decided to intervene with a multidisciplinary scientific approach to give scientific value to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and thus foster the quality of life at every level of social interaction.

On the basis of the Italian Prime Minister's Office Directive (December 13, 2001) on the training and improving of civil servants, IPV started important initiatives at all levels aimed at improving civil servants, managers and local agencies staff to help solving the chaos generated by incoming information. Our contribution is aimed at restoring order and harmony in social systems, acting on the causes engendering conflicts which produce great lacks of balance. Society has to be freed from the slavery of conditionings asserting the “superiority” of man over man thus denying the universality of human dignity. The last intervention:

“The Power of dignity within human resources” was made in November 2006 upon invitation by Riano Flaminio Mayor for borough council clerks and municipal staff.

The world has not yet tools to verify wisdom even if universal values are integrated in most Constitutions.

We may say that formal democracy has been achieved, but actions are needed so that form becomes substance to give life to a real democracy at planetary level, integrating biological and juridical imperatives.

New scientific tools are needed for education enabling each one to clearly keep inside values and projects to be achieved.

This proposal is already expressed in the world since ever. Now we have to motivate human beings to an universal consciousness nourished with universal knowledge valid and recognizable by every people of the Earth. We must pass from destruction stemming from internal conflicts of human beings to construction rendering them always more free from conditionings and deeply motivated to act wherever they can express themselves in favour of their microsystems respecting the macrosystem to which we all belong.
